New Nirvana live to be released October 9

From The Muddy Banks Of The Wishkah, a collection of live performances by grunge trendsetters Nirvana, will be released October 9 via DGC Records (distributed in Canada by MCA).

The album will feature 16 tracks, recorded between 1989 and 1994, at various venues in locales such as Seattle, London and Amsterdam. The sites range from small, intimate clubs, to the massive Reading Festival in England.

The two remaining Nirvana members, Krist Novoselic and Dave Grohl, spent several months listening to more than a hundred hours of tapes to select the tracks.

According to Novoselic, "It's an aggressive record. Hopefully, people who didn't get to see us live will get a flavour of what the band was all about. Most of the songs we chose were ones we played every night."

Novoselic also contributed the liner notes for the album.

Mixed by Andy Wallace, the album represents the harder side of Nirvana in concert, as compared to the more acoustical side documented on the 1994 release, MTV Unplugged In New York.

Originally, a two-CD live set was in the offing, featuring one side culled from the band's MTV Unplugged set, and another from the group's electric performances. However, the process of reviewing the live tapes, so soon after the April '94 suicide of Kurt Cobain, proved too emotionally difficult for Novoselic and Grohl, resulting in the Unplugged set being released on its own.

According to DGC A&R exec Mark Kates, "Nirvana was a great live band and I always felt there should be an album to document the intensity of their best performances. Unplugged represents a great moment and an important side of the band, but this record gets to the core of what it was like to see one of their shows."

Two tracks on From The Muddy Banks Of The Wishkah actually predate the band's breakthrough album, Nevermind: Polly and Breed both being recorded in London in 1989. The majority of the songs come from the band's 1991 world tour: Drain You, Aneurysm, Smells Like Teen Spirit, Been A Son, Lithium, School, Negative Creep, Blew and Spank Thru. The recording of Tourette's comes from the band's 1992 appearance at the Reading Festival. Sliver, Scentless Apprentice and Heart-Shaped Box come from the In Utero tour, while Milk It comes from a January 1994 concert in Seattle.

From The Muddy Banks Of The Wishkah is named for the river that intersects Aberdeen, Washington, where the group was founded, and where Novoselic and Cobain grew up.

Aerosmith fires manager after a dozen years, new album delayed

After helping to bring the band back into worldwide prominence, and aiding them in their fight to kick rampant substance abuse, long-time Aerosmith manager Tim Collins was given the door last week.

Aerosmith, who enjoyed strong success in the seventies with classic songs like Walk This Way and Dream On, rebounded in the late '80s to once again become one of the world's top-selling acts with a series of successful albums on the Geffen label. The band recently left Geffen to sign a $50 million multi-album deal with Sony.

Collins noted in a press release that he was fired by the band during a meeting held in a Boston hotel at the end of July. According to a story in The Boston Globe, Collins noted, "They're great entertainers, but I had a definite vision, and they told me...that they don't share that vision."

Collins went on to note that the band members didn't wish to support such causes as lobbying for sobriety and First Amendment rights. Band members were also apparently annoyed at the fact that Collins wanted them to record more songs for their upcoming album, which they felt was already a done deal.

Sony apparently agreed with Collins, and the release of the new album has been postponed from September to late November, at the earliest. For the moment, Aerosmith has promoted guitarist Joe Perry to the appropriately-titled position of chairman of the board, to handle the band's management.

The 42 year-old Collins has supposedly turned down management offers from Guns N' Roses, Pearl Jam and Bruce Hornsby, and reportedly also turned down an offer to manage the Kiss comeback tour.

Charlatans to carry on after Collin's death

Following the sudden death of keyboardist Rob Collins, the UK group The Charlatans released a statement, indicating the group will continue onward.

Collins, a founding member of the band, was killed in a car accident on July 23 in Wales. The group, often compared with The Stone Roses, had their first flash of fame in the early '90s in the so-called Manchester Explosion, which also offered the likes of the Roses, the Happy Mondays and Inspiral Carpets.

The band were working at Rockfield Studios in Wales on their fifth album at the time of Collins' death. A statement indicated that the album was "75% complete", and that the remaining band members would return to the studio in October in the hopes of releasing the album in the new year.

The group will release the lead single, One To Another, as scheduled on August 26. The single will be accompanied by a video, completed with Collins just seven days before his death.

The band will also make just two live appearances in the coming weeks: an August 11 date with Oasis at Knebworth, and an August 18 show supporting Paul Weller at Chelmsford.

According to the statement released by the band, "The decision has been made to carry on because we have to continue in his memory. It's what he would have wanted. He lived it like he loved it and he ran out of time. There will be no change."

Canadian country music newcomers Terri Clark and Paul Brandt lead the nominees for the 1996 Canadian Country Music Awards, which take place the night of September 9 on CTV Television, the finale of Country Music Week in Calgary.

Terri Clark

Clark was also one of five artists nominated for the prestigious NCN Fan's Choice entertainer of the year award. Also nominated alongside Clark for entertainer of the year are Shania Twain, Charlie Major, Prairie Oyster and Michelle Wright.

The NCN Fan's Choice award is just that, voted on by the country music listening public. Fans can call 1-900-561-2262 (1-900-561-CCMA) to vote, which each vote counted automatically until the day of the show. Country superstar Garth Brooks will make the entertainer of the year award presentation via satellite, during his concert in Saint John, New Brunswick.

Mercury/Polydor artist Clark leads the 1996 CCMA's with seven nominations. Along with her entertainer of the year nod, Clark is also nominated for single and SOCAN song (Better Things To Do), album, female vocalist, video (When Boy Meets Girl) and the Vista Rising Star award as top newcomer.

JVC Jazz Festival returns to Toronto in August

With an extensive, wide-ranging lineup of jazz and its various off-shoots, the JVC Jazz Festival makes a return trip to Toronto in the month of August. The lineup of artists features everyone from trumpeter Art Farmer, to rocker Joe Cocker, to bluesman Buddy Guy.

According to George Wein, who produces JVC Festivals in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, "Toronto is rapidly gaining a reputation as The Canadian jazz city. The success of the Du Maurier International Downtown Jazz Festival proves that Toronto is recapturing its legendary status as one of the most important jazz cities in North America. We made our first foray into the city last year, in a very limited way, and we are expanding slowly."

The JVC Festival will be marked by a series of free concerts at various venues throughout the city. Guitar/vocal duo Tuck & Patti will appear at Harbourfront on August 20. Fusion stars SpyroGyra and King Sunny Ade will appear at Harbourfront on Aug. 22 and 24 respectively. All three of these free shows begin at 8 pm. Guitarist Larry Coryell makes a rare Toronto appearance on Aug. 21 with a 6 pm free concert at Nathan Phillips Square.

Joe Cocker will kick off the festival when he headlines a House Of Blues Supershow at the Molson Amphitheatre on Aug. 19.

The Sheffield-born Cocker will share the stage with such blues stalwarts as Buddy Guy, The Fabulous Thunderbirds, The Radiators and The Gale Brothers. Tickets for this show are available through Ticketmaster.

Three local clubs will also take part in the JVC festival. San Francisco harmonica player Mark Hummel will perform on Aug. 22 at the Silver Dollar, with Saffire The Uppity Blues Women trio performing their on Aug. 23 and 24.

Trumpeter Art Farmer is at The Senator on Aug. 20 through 25, supported by Geoff Keezer, Kenny Davis and Carl Allen. And Jamaican jazz guitarist Ernest Ranglin makes his Toronto debut at the Montreal Bistro on Aug. 20 through 24.

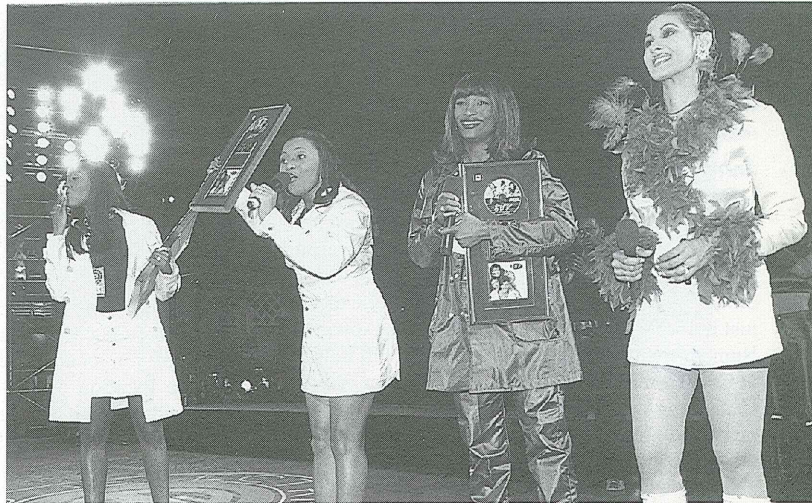

The JVC Jazz Festival Country Cornroast will take place Aug. 24 and 25 at the outdoor amphitheatre at Puck's Farm, 45 minutes north of Toronto.

The Saturday afternoon shows feature pianists Doug Riley and Scott Cushine, along with the Bob DeAngelis Dixielanders and Smoke. The Sunday afternoon lineup features Riley and Cushine, along with singer Tommy Ambrose and pianist Norm Amadio, the Youth Outreach Choir, and multi-instrumentalist Ken Whiteley with gospel singers David Wall, Amoy Levy and Pat Patrick.

A public information line, 416-410-7656, contains all the information of the festival events.

Anne Murray signs autographs for a few adoring fans during an in-store appearance at Sam The Record Man at the Halifax Shopping Centre. Murray was in town promoting her latest EMI self-titled album.

BMG artist SWV are presented with gold awards for their RCA release New Beginning by Electric Circus host Monika Deol. The presentation took place at Canada's Wonderland, during Deol's final appearance as host of the dance program.

WALT SAYS . . . !

Insulting the eardrums!!! Those morning team cacklers are a real turn-off. It doesn't seem to matter what show you tune into, there they are. Where a meaningful giggle would do, they prefer those pretentious, loud and irritating cackles. I can put up with the sometimes there Wally Crouter and his very-opinionated sports partner, who can get a rise out of me quite often. I hope the new guy doesn't show up with unnecessary baggage, like a cackler. If he does, there goes the show, for me anyway. (EC: What the hell's a cackler???)

with Elvira Caprese

Government nod to Dick Drew!!! Contrary to what we hear on a daily basis from BC, Ottawa does recognize lotusland. In fact, the House of Commons, through Reform MP Bob Ringma (Nanaimo-Cowichan), paid tribute to Dick Drew and his Canadian Achievers. After giving a brief history of Dick's own achievements, he said "For those looking to find a source which highlights the spirit and motivation of individual Canadians, Dick Drew's radio show and book on Canadian achievers is a welcome contribution to Canadian unity." (EC: Here! Here!)

The little guys are hurtin' too!!! I wonder how many of us are aware that there are still a lot of mom & pop record stores across the nation, and small one-stops. These small operations, most hanging by a thread, have refused to be pushed out of the way or intimidated by the large chains. So, business is bad with the major chains? How about these little guys, who don't have the advantage of huge discounts, and who we hear from, from time to time? Cove Distributors, out in Prince Rupert, D&B Music Emporium up in Brampton, Ontario, and Wilson & Lee in Oshawa. They're all subscribers to RPM, and in the case of Wilson & Lee, from the beginning. Bernie Hunter at D&B is pretty steamed up over the amount of business she loses to the record clubs. But she also has harsh words for some of the record companies, who charge them top buck for product. Of course, she can't buy in large quantities like the chain operations, but nevertheless, these small operations do sell product and might even order more if they were given some discount consideration. (EC: It was a fun industry during the mom & pop days!!!)

Jane Bunnett shafted!!! The US paranoia over Canadians doing business with Cuba has it's first casualty, a Canadian jazz artist. Jane Bunnett, who has gained critical acclaim in jazz circles around the world, has been given the American "thumbs-down". All her US dates were reportedly cancelled just before she was to sign the contract. Apparently Bunnett owns a house and has some club holdings in Cuba. An insider with US Immigration hints that Canadians who take holidays in Cuba, might also be on the grease. And on their next trip south, they could be denied entry into the US. (EC: Their computers must be pretty full!!!)

Blockbuster air miles??? Blockbuster is not only advertising that they have the "hottest stars in music," but they're giving away 10 bonus air miles if you buy one of them, if you have a voucher, that is. The voucher has a pretty good four-colour display of some of the titles they're offering, including Bryan Adams, Gloria Estefan, Toni Braxton, Tragically Hip, Metallica and Def Leppard. Wisely, they haven't mentioned prices. (EC: Others do, like $13.95 for Black Crowes, or how about Dance Hits '96, the #1 album last week, for $14.79???)

Right on! Alanis!!! Some of the media weasels are complaining about the "tight-lip" of Alanis Morissette. Hopefully, she'll continue the mystique. Obviously, it hasn't hurt. Her Jagged Little Pill album is about to break the 12-million sales mark, a record for a solo female, set by Whitney Houston back in 1985. (EC: Watch for a media gangbang!!!)

Not the time!!! Rumours have it that one major is considering lifting prices. One guy says it's better to raise prices when the business is flat. Then, when business kicks into gear, usually in the fall, the impact of higher prices would have come and gone. In theory, that's pretty good logic, and it's worked in the past. Let's hope that business kicks in, in the fall, not like last year, three weeks before Christmas. (EC: Let's be positive now!!!)

Randy Bachman Fonds??? The music division of the National Library of Canada, a staid organization if there ever was a staid organization, scored a coup. They're calling it "a breakthrough into the rock music world." Randy Bachman, late of the Guess Who, Brave Belt and BTO, as well as having his finger in Iron Horse, Trooper, Original Crayons and Noah, and, I'm sure, others, has turned over to the national library "more than eight linear metres (EC: I see what you mean by staid!!!) of textual documents and hundreds of hours of recorded sound." That includes biographical sketches, information on contracts, scores and lyrics to songs, prizes, awards and honourable mentions, and a lot more. Then, archivist and consultant Stéphane Jean went to work, numerically listing what is now a national treasure under the heading of the Randy Bachman Fonds (EC: What's a fond???). And, according to the Webster Encyclopedic Dictionary, fond means "to be foolish; to play the fool." (EC: You gotta be kidding!!!) Wait, there's more. It also means "Having affection for; excessively affectionate; cherished highly or unreasonably, as He had fond hopes of becoming a millionaire." (EC: Now! I got it. What a great tax write-off!!!)

Venue is here to stay!!! Dick Smyth, in a recent Toronto Sun column, takes on people who use "venue" for location. We know it's a legal term for the location of a crime or the place where a trial will be held, but it's been a part of rock 'n roll since the beginning. When managers, bookers and agents use it, it kind of gives them a feeling of being legal, you know legit. (EC: Them, you can count on one hand!!!) And then, when writers began using it in reference to concerts, that was it. The next wave of dictionaries will probably list "venue" as a place where a concert is held, and then the lawyers can take offense. (EC: If they can make money, they will!!!)

On the road, again!!! When that record-company-on-the-road bus has a flat tire on the Trans-Canada Highway, what in-bus executive will have to change the tire? (EC: Answer! Next week? If they have a flat tire!!!)

Ho! Hum! Warner Warriors!!! They still top the standing and could be a shoo-in for the RPM Cup. Here's this week's scores:

Toronto's Big Rude Jake releases new album to rave reviews

The politic of the three dimensional artist

by Rod Gudino

Swing kids they called them, and during the world war they were looked on as the personification of rebellion, brash youth and free spirit, embodying the desires of a saner world in the guise of carefree adolescence. Over fifty years after the fact, there is no Luftwaffe whistling over the city and punk rock and its influences have become the uncouth, violent and dirty rebellion of a new world for which war is only a series of old photographs.

And it was perhaps because of this changed modern climate that the dark and trimly suited Gentlemen Players led by one Big Rude Jake caused more furrowed brows than wide eyes when they broke into Toronto's moderately conservative independent scene several years ago. Not that the talent was not evident from the get-go, just that the artist as marketable commodity was lost within the turn of the century gangster noire world which Jake and Gentlemen did their utmost to inhabit.

As a result, Big Rude Jake was largely overlooked as a novelty act by industry majors in Canada, though the independent market caught hold of the upswing instantly, propelling and maintaining Jake's 1993 debut titled Butane Fumes And Bad Cologne at the top of retail indie charts for nine consecutive months. As novelty, Jake and Gentlemen Players had hit their audience bang on, making a gangster heaven of Toronto's little Italy at midnight and contributing to at least a marginal rise in suit sales around the city.

There was however, one small crease in the black solid line of pressed Armanis: the absence of a desire to be classified as a novelty act in the first place. Releasing a live album in 1994 as a calling card for their continued existence, Jake set about to bring important changes to his group by juggling band members, trimming the act's name to his own and setting about to record a starkly new record called Blue Pariah, which saw release this past June.

The album, which is one of those must-hear releases, has deftly cut at the artery of novelty while maintaining the corpus of the original vision. All of the pretence in Jake's stogie chomping badass attitude has been dipped in formaldehyde while the music has taken a sharp turn to the right... off a cliff and into a maelstrom of concentrated rebel yells through the 20th century. From jazz and swing, to blues, soul and punk - the wild spirit of the generations is here fired by blood, iced by sagacity and blown larger than life by musical self-government and precision timing. Like we said, Blue Pariah is one of those albums that has got to be heard.

Jake, who is acutely aware of the band's historical, musical and lyrical roots to the degree of qualified academe, is also aware that he has struck on something oddly new and yet glaringly familiar on Blue Pariah. The man of whom Big Sugar's Gordie Johnson once said lives like a pauper and looks like a king, speaks like artist, promoter and manager all at once, continuously lapsing from pragmatism to poetry without losing that crucial sense of timing.

"My reasons for liking [the album] are pretty selfish," he concedes. "I'm very happy that we are able to give it a very contemporary and very unified sound; that we were able to put the songs first and that we were able to take a little bit of time to develop each song. In doing so we were able to demonstrate that the band are a bunch of excellent players, that the songs are well written and well arranged and that the lyrics are something worth listening to."

Undoubtedly the sensibility of his approach was what, at least in part, rescued Jake from the trinket box of the disposable novelty act. Though as yet still ignored by majors, the industry at the street level has sat up and taken notice that Blue Pariah has more than given spats to jazz and dressed up the blues. And those who have become aware have governed themselves accordingly: just last week Toronto's Outside Records agreed to distribute Blue Pariah. Later, a new agency decided that they would work in tandem with Jake to push the release.

"I've had people come up to me since the release of the record and say I've been a fan of yours for three or four years and I never realised how great the songs were," says Jake. "That's immediately thrilling and disheartening at the same time because it just goes to show how difficult it is to get a message across in a nightclub."

The interest has also caught on with artists such as Big Sugar's Gordie Johnson, who produced, and Ashley MacIsaac who appears on the new album. "There was a lot of energy going down at that time," says Jake of the collaborations. "It was a pretty exciting place to be and we ended up working on each others projects a lot."

Though still commercially unproven, the album stands a serious shot at the alternative mainstream, taking into consideration the accessible and punk contemporary backbone of the disc, evidenced especially in tunes like Cold Steel Hammer, Swing Baby!, Sliver Man and the title track.

But after all, Big Rude Jake is still very much a dramatis persona; as much the mythical blue pariah who is the album's centrepiece as the inhabitant of the diners and streets strewn with garbage and magical realism which describe his reinvented Toronto. To industry majors that might still reek of novelty but Jake contends it is not so. Ever the pragmatist, he insists that all of that has to do as much with artistic expression as it does with plain survival.

"I think one of the biggest problems that any artist has is to appear three dimensional in the media, especially young artists," he says. "If you are an artist that has been around for a couple of decades like Bob Dylan or even Elvis Costello, then you have the leverage over time to be able to explore and express many aspects of your character and of your art. But for the most part we live in a soundbite society."

"I think it was Noam Chomsky who said it is impossible to describe a new idea in less than twenty minutes. So if you have a new band I would imagine you need at least twenty minutes to describe it, but there is no twenty minutes in the media. So if you don't pick an image that is not easily packaged into something neat and tidy and expressible in five syllables or less, then you are running a risk of being misunderstood, ignored or worse, having an image crafted for you."

For a person like Big Rude Jake, the possibility of being handed an ready-made image might be just as bad as having the image he so laboured to fashion disintegrate before the acidic effects of marketing requirements ultimately insensitive and ignorant of his product's aesthetic and material value. That possibility was something that Jake had to eliminate.

"We were the great big funny wise guys I think for a long time in Canadian music and fortunately we've had a lot of people sit down and listen to the record," he says, noting that there has been a marked change in the public's perception of Big Rude Jake since the album's release. But Jake knows that a rule is merely a suggestion on playing the game, just as he knows that the clever man never gives his hand up entirely, especially when he's got a winner.

"I'd be lying to you if I said I wasn't a bit of a wiseguy anyway," he laughs. "I mean, it isn't like that isn't true. But at the same time there is more to the story and it's finally coming out. I wish it happened seven years ago, but there you go."

NIGEL KENNEDY -Instrumental
Kafka
EMI-52212-F

If the world of classical world has anything of a rock and roll spiritual adviser, that person would likely be Mr. Kennedy. Not content to simply sift through the back catalogues of the classical array, settling comfortably into the world of pristine concert halls and modest record sales, Kennedy has instead flexed his violin bow like a double-edged sword, slamming his way through the classics the way one of his idols, Jimi Hendrix, ravaged his way through the Star Spangled Banner, bringing to it a new life and new energy. Kennedy became the classical world's punk rocker, capable of making even as soft a piece as Vivaldi's Four Seasons sound like something new and vibrant. His Vivaldi interpretation is now considered one of the biggest selling classical CDs of all time, and its success, combined with Kennedy's concert success, paved the way for this inspiring diversion, as close a device to classical pop as anything ever attempted before. Kennedy originally had set his sights on the music of Hendrix himself. But he backed away, instead taking a more prosaic approach, sifting through traditional melodies from throughout the world, working with some extraordinarily gifted musicians, to come up with this unique piece of work. New age is the first phrase that comes to mind, but that would be shuffling Kennedy off into a specific category, and specifics aren't fair for a work such as this. The musicians working with him - guitarist John Etheridge, bassist Danny Thompson, violin Stephane Grappelli, vocalists Jane Siberry and Stephen Duffy, among others - all bring a differing sensibility to the work. The most inspiring is drummer Manu Katché (Peter Gabriel, Sting), perhaps the most musical drummer in existence, who brings added life to the works. Autumn Regrets is the beautiful opening piece, and also key are I Believe In God, From Adam To Eve, Soleil Levant, Sure La Seine and Breathing Stone. It's hard to describe it, you'll just have to hear it and decide for yourself what category it fits into. If you really need to categorize it, that is.

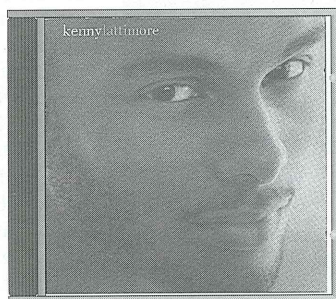

TIN CUP O.S.T. -Rock/Pop
Various Artists
Epic-67609-H

The whole idea behind this soundtrack thing is that people will go see the movie, hear the great tunes that fill up the soundtrack, and then rush out and buy the CD. Well, that's supposed to be how it works, anyway. What seems to be happening now is that the CD suppliers are turning this soundtrack business into its own self-sustaining lifeline.

Forget about waiting for the movie, waiting to see whether or not it'll be a hit or not. Let's just throw the soundtrack out there, led in by a good lead single, and will worry about the movie selling the songs at a later date. It worked with Empire Records (did anyone see the movie), and it could easily work here, as well. This soundtrack is just loaded with hit potential, with any number of the 14 tunes ready and waiting to be picked up by AC or country radio programmers. The Epic soundtrack is obviously slanted towards Sony artists, hence the inclusion of such current hot artists as Amanda Marshall (the lead single, This Could Take All Night), Patty Loveless (Where Are You Boy), Mary Chapin Carpenter (Let Me Into Your Heart) and Shawn Colvin (Back To Salome). But there's also a mishmash of strong artists from other labels as well, like Bruce Hornsby (Big Stick, Nobody There But Me), the underrated Joe Ely (Character Flaw), and Chris Isaak (I Wonder). In other words, this soundtrack should be able to float along on its own just fine. Now, when you factor in the fact that this is Kevin Costner's big comeback film, following the near-disaster that was Waterworld, well, you can see why Epic is betting heavily on this one.

KENNY LATTIMORE -R&B
Kenny Lattimore
Columbia-67125-H

Pure rhythm and blues, the kind of stuff that Motown was churning out in waves in the sixties and seventies, has been something like a lost little puppy in the past few years. The stuff that the labels like to call R&B is more often than not just slow moving dance and pop, stamped with an R&B code to make it a little more appealing for the right crowd. Pure R&B and soul, the stuff that made legends out of Sam Cooke and Otis Redding, would shrivel up and die if it had a drum machine or computer sampler slapped on to it. And that's where Mr. Lattimore comes in. You see, this particular fellow has some talent. It's not enough that he's a terrific singer, which he is, enough to make most of the pretenders out there shiver in their boots. But the fact is, he's also a terrific songwriter, and it's that double duty that is making the folks at Columbia in the US just so excited they're ready to burst. Lattimore is also a producer in his own right, but he chose, perhaps wisely, to allow the well-heeled likes of Keith Crouch, Kipper Jones, Herb Middleton, Kenneth Crouch and others to make the production decisions. There's still some dance-tinge stuff here, like the uptempo, beat-oriented movers like the lead single, Never Too Busy, or Just What It Takes. But there's also some quieter moments too, with For You and Always Remember. And it's in those quieter moments, the ones where Lattimore's voice really shines through, that you appreciate what a could R&B/soul singer can do - reach down into your insides and fill you up with something few others can even feel.

ALICE IN CHAINS -Alternative
MTV Unplugged
Columbia 67703-H

It seems that when Nirvana decided that they could do an unplugged album, they pretty much opened wide the door for any band, however removed from the acoustic, to exploit the subtleties and tender possibilities buried in their music. But Alice In Chains? Before you laugh too loud, be reminded that a group like this, whose music unquestionably belongs to the hard and heavy end of things, could benefit most from an unplugged set as the music stands to undergo the most drastic transformation in doing so. Alice In Chains have certainly realised that in putting out an unplugged release they would have to virtually reinvent many of their staple tunes. They have risen to the challenge by putting out an exceptionally crafted, musically perceptive body of work. From the slow and contemplative Nutshell to harder edged Sludge Factory, Alice's sombre apocalypses are made into soft narcotic flowers, pretty in their own hideous kind of way, by the use of acoustic guitar. More than Nirvana, MTV can lay claim to adding fire fury to a trend that has found an extremity of expression and success in a band such as Alice In Chains. Expect a high entrance at retail with a good chance at longevity.

THE IRISH DESCENDANTS -Celtic/Pop
Live! On The Edge
WEA-14857-P

One listen to The Rock And A Hard Place, cleverly released as the first focus track (comp 294), is proof positive there's more to these Newfoundland lads than the wailing of celtic traditional material that's becoming redundant. Big Con O'Brien has that equally big voice to do justice to Bruce Guthro's lyrics and music. Country programmers should patch into this track. It's a natural end-of-summer type of song. By the way, that's Kim Deschamps of Blue Rodeo on peddle steel and Cindy Church with a vocal assist. Also key is Uncle Dan and Dirty Old Town. And, a wonderfully-interpreted Ron Hynes ditty titled Away. No! The lads haven't forsaken their celtic roots. They've mixed in some memorable gems like The Irish Rover with the more contemporary Ron Kavanagh's Shamrock City and Lennie Gallant's Days Of Giving. They've also sneaked in a delightful instrumental, The Eavesdropper/The Connaughtman's Ramble with no credits. Kathy Phippard's keyboard work is exceptional, leading the way for the other traditional and contemporary instrumental offerings that are so much a part of these proud fishermen cum musicians. Recorded and mixed at Solar Audio in Halifax.

ALBUM PICK

A TRIBUTE TO STEVIE RAY VAUGHAN -Rock/Blues
Various Artists
Epic-67599-H

It was the night of August 26, 1990 that a truly once-in-a-lifetime group of artists got together to put on a memorable night of blues, a group that featured the likes of Eric Clapton, Buddy Guy, Bonnie Raitt, Robert Cray, Doctor John, B.B. King, and of course, Stevie Ray and little brother Jimmie. Then, the helicopter crashed, the blues world shook with the accompanying tremor, and an artist just reaching his creative nadir was gone. Five years later, those artists who had shared the stage with Stevie Ray were back together again, to hold a concert, and to keep the memory alive. It's strange what the death of an artist will do, how it will elevate that artist to a new height never seen during their lifetime. But in Vaughan's case, the elevation is apt. He was a monumental talent, one who took the simplest blues ideas and turned them into rock and roll fire. In the span of just a handful of albums, Vaughan had left an impressive legacy, and the rush of fans to gather in the glow after his death hasn't diminished that legacy one bit. That's why these artists gathered again - they knew the music meant enough to keep Vaughan's spirit alive, more than the novelty of his tragic demise. Epic, instead of focusing on one track, is basically servicing the entire album to radio, allowing them the difficult task of focusing on just one track, which won't be easy. You've got Bonnie Raitt slamming out Pride And Joy, Jimmie bringing his own power to Texas Flood, Buddy Guy straining out Long Way From Home, Clapton squeezing in Ain't Gone N Give Up On Your Love, etc., etc. Jimmie apparently said he wanted everyone to play like themselves, and not try and imitate his brother. And it works, in a big, big way.

A collage of music-related icons including a cassette tape, a CD, a treble clef, and musical notes.

BOOKS

BRUCE HARING: OFF THE CHARTS Ruthless Days And Reckless Nights Inside The Music Industry, 226 pages (hardcover). Birch Lane Press $27.95.

"...the refinement and precision that have entered the business have made it much easier to sell rebellion, all pre-packaged and ready for home consumption...as a result, music, the purest form of artistic expression we have in the mass media, is being homogenized in unprecedented ways by corporate culture."

If you're one of those who fear that the record industry is falling into the hands of the suits and bean counters, then read on. If you are, in fact, one of those suits, then read no further. Off The Charts is a scathing look at the modern day record business, and one that should be required reading for every major label exec and aspiring artist. Haring isn't necessarily a great writer. He tends to juggle about four or five different ideas in the confines of one sentence, making for some very tricky reading. But he makes up for his literary shortcomings with his extensive research. Haring has interviewed dozens of industry insiders, from all the major labels, giving a solid air of authenticity to this book. The hypothesis of the book is clear from the outset: namely that the streetwise, talent-wise record company veterans from the past have been superseded by the new wave of suits and accountants, largely because of the dominance of the six major multinationals. Haring believes, and he backs it up with numbers and quotes, that the increased emphasis on marketing and corporate image have plowed under artist development. Everything is based on market share and, of course, hits, hits and more hits. The principal focus of Haring's expose is EMI, particularly the corporate battles that ensued at the company in the '80s, when the label's market share was suffering. He delves into the world of Charles Koppelman, the current chairman/CEO of the EMI Records Group North America, a man who helped redefine how artists are marketed, and oversaw the rise and rapid fall of the likes of Arrested

Development, Vanilla Ice and Wilson Phillips. Haring examines the power that is MTV, and how it has changed the way artists are marketed. He looks at some of the biggest label takeovers in recent history, including PolyGram's purchase of Island and EMI's over-priced purchase of Virgin. He exposes the multinationals' unilateral decision to push through compact discs, killing vinyl to boost their own sagging profit margins. And finally, he looks at the implementation of Soundscan and BDS, and how they have eliminated the old school method of 'buying' hit records. One interesting aspect of Haring's examination is his views of alternative music. As he correctly points out, the record companies have bought up the genre lock, stock and barrel, and have bought out the off-key rebellion that made alternative so popular in the first place. Instead of signing and developing young alternative acts and sticking with them, the labels now view alternative acts as they do any other - if they don't hit big quickly, they're gone. It's one of Haring's most elemental discoveries, and just one of the reasons why this book is superb reading. The suits are running the shop, and whether they like music or not is at this point, a meaningless complication.

Doyle has earned some considerable attention with her song and video, A List Of Things. Her latest single, Whatever You Need, is also on its way up the charts.

Upcoming solo shows for Doyle include the the Lunenburg Folk Festival (August 9), and the Ultrasound Showbar in Toronto (29).

Dates with the Ladies include Scarborough's Centennial College (Sept. 5), Niagara College in Welland (6), St. Catharines' Brock University (7), the Rochester Auditorium in Rochester, N.Y. COUNTRY

Chris Cummings tops the chart with his Warner Bros single, Sure Enough, the follow-up to I Waited, his debut release on the Warner Bros label. His debut was the most added (RPM - Jan. 22/96) entering the chart at #78, peaking at #4 (March 18/96). The new single was the most added (June 17/96) entering the chart at #72, and now, eight weeks later, jumps into the #1 slot. The song was written by New Brunswicker Cummings, Rick Scott and Frank Dycus. Both tracks are included on his album, Somewhere Inside, which Cummings produced with Joe Ed Barnhill.

Michelle Wright threatens the #1 slot with her latest Arista release, Nobody's Girl, moving up to #2. There's been no denying that Wright would bounce back into chart prominence with the out-of-the-box send-off the first single from her new album created with country programmers. The country programmer acceptance of Wright's new single and the retail action for her CD reflects the intensity of the well laid-on promotion campaign mounted by BMG to bring Wright back into her rightful position as a major force in Canadian country music. The winner of five Big Country awards as top country female vocalist (1989, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994), and four CCMA awards in the same category (1990, 1991, 1992, 1993), Wright is again nominated in this category for this year's CCMA awards. Wright has also been nominated in the NCN fan's choice entertainer of the year category. Wright's backup band is also prominent in the CCMA's citation nominations. As well as being nominated in the backup band category, Daniel Nadasdi has been nominated in the keyboard category; and Lee Warren in the steel guitar category.

BNA's David Chesney has the big gainer of the week with his latest release, Me And You, jumping into the #53 slot from #85 after only three weeks on the chart. The focus single is the title track of his album, which was produced by Barry Beckett. The new single was written by Skip Ewing and Ray Herndon.

Charlie Major has made a huge impact on country programmers with his latest focus track, Waiting On You. This new release, a Major original, is the most added this week, entering the chart at #77. Released as a CD single, the track was taken from Major's Arista album, Lucky Man. The album was produced by Steve Fishell. Major is looking good for this year's CCMA awards, having been nominated as NCN fan's choice entertainer of the year; male vocalist, single and SOCAN song for I Do It For The Money; and album, for Lucky Man. His band has also been nominated for a citation award in the backup category. And his guitarist Jason Barry has been nominated in the guitar category.

Jason McCoy bounces back into the Top 5 with his MCA release, All The Way, showing a resurgence. This extra spurt of activity is due his extensive tour across the country and his giving of free time to country programmers in the large, medium and smaller markets. McCoy, who won a Big Country award this year as male vocalist, has been nominated in this year's CCMA awards as male vocalist and in the Vista (Rising Star) category.

Billy Ray Cyrus goes western swing with his new release, Trail Of Tears. The brunt of a lot of cruel jokes by many of his peers, obviously envious over the success of his Achy Breaky Heart single, which topped the RPM Country 100 (June 27/92) and the phenomenal sales of his album, Some Give All, Cyrus isn't about to lay down. He's touring and renewing his connections at country radio. And Trail Of Tears, a Cyrus original, could bring him back into prominence. The new release is the title track of his upcoming Mercury CD, which was produced by Cyrus and Terry Shelton.

Issue

AD DEADLINE:
AUGUST 21

As Latin music and its various offshoots begin to invade the Canadian charts, RPM's August 26 issue will focus on the music that has everyone and their uncle dancing the Macarena. The special issue will feature industry insight into the overall market, a focus on the current Latin product available at Canadian retail, and interviews with key figures in the industry on the reasons for this latest Latin binge. RPM will also delve into the prominent place Latin music has attained in the dance world, particularly at radio.
